

Glen Innes to Tamaki Drive

Shared Path

Walk, run and cycle from Auckland's eastern suburbs
to the Waitemata

Auckland Transport (AT) and the NZ Transport Agency are designing a shared path for cyclists and pedestrians that will follow the eastern rail line from Glen Innes Station to Tamaki Drive.

The joint project will deliver a seven kilometre-long path connecting Auckland's eastern suburbs to the city centre. The path will be constructed in four stages, with completion expected in 2018.

The path will complete a missing link in the Auckland Cycle Network and connect with cycle routes to Pt England and the shared path along Tamaki Drive. The natural beauty and magnificent views along the route will appeal to people commuting into the city as well as those using the path for fitness and recreation.

Path features

- The path will be around four metres wide and constructed mostly in concrete. Timber boardwalks will be used for short water crossings such as Orakei Basin and concrete for longer structures such as the proposed Hobson Bay crossing.
- The path will be safe and convenient for use by people on foot and on bike.
- Good lighting will extend hours of access, particularly during winter months.
- The route's geography is hilly in places, but the design of the path will keep gradients as low as possible.
- The path design will link into local communities and the project will identify future links that could be built at a later date.
- The path will connect communities with public transport along the route.
- We are seeking input from the community to help shape aspects of the path.

HAVE YOUR SAY

Tell us your thoughts! Community feedback will help us design a path that can be used and enjoyed by everyone.

You can provide feedback at the open day on 22 November, or online from the same day at www.AT.govt.nz/easternpath
